In the face of overwhelming obstacles—limited resources, systems and solutions that no longer work, resistance to change—how do we engage our radical creativity, deepen our level of commitment, and bring ourselves forth as champions of change?

Join Jean Houston Foundation trainers as we take a Social Artistry™ inside/out approach to personal leadership that can contribute to creating sustainable change in your community. Whether you are actively engaged in community projects or finding your authentic role and voice in community action, this work will assist you to:

- Develop and use inner strength to bring commitment, resolve and courage to leadership in shifting times
- Develop personal empowerment and skills for deep levels of collaboration
- Adapt to the dissonance and ambiguity that frequently accompanies change
- Engage in the change of attitudes and beliefs that need to occur to support meaningful team and project work
- Break through existing habits and paradigms that are no longer useful and tap into more of your creativity
- Access more of your emotional intelligence
- Move from vision to action that engages your heart, mind and soul

As an agent of change, experience the power of applying these tools within your family, your community, and the world.
