The Third International Congress on Ericksonian Approaches to Hypnosis and Psychotherapy
DECEMBER 3-7, 1986 — Phoenix, Arizona

Keynote Address by Virginia Satir

The Milton H. Erickson Foundation is organizing the Third International Congress on Ericksonian Approaches to Hypnosis and Psychotherapy to be held December 3-7, 1986, in Phoenix, Arizona. We are honored to announce that Virginia Satir has agreed to present a keynote address.

The meeting will be held at the convention center and surrounding hotels in downtown Phoenix.

Applications will be made to provide continuing education credits for physicians, psychologists, and other mental health professionals.

The Congress will be open to professionals in health related fields including physicians, doctoral level psychologists, and dentists who are qualified for membership in, or are members of, their respective professional organizations (e.g., AMA, APA, ADA). The Congress is also open to professionals with mental health related graduate degrees, (e.g., MSW, MSN, MA, or MS) from accredited institutions. Applications from graduate students in accredited programs leading to a degree in the above fields will be accepted if they supply a letter from their department on letterhead stationery certifying their student status as of December, 1986.

Brochures and registration forms will be sent to professionals on the Erickson Foundation mailing list in early 1986. Significant registration fee discounts will be offered to those who register early. Join us in Phoenix for this special event!

Call for Presentations

Come to Phoenix to present a paper, short-course, or symposia at The Third International Congress on Ericksonian Approaches to Hypnosis and Psychotherapy. Complete the Presentation Cover Sheet (see page 2) and send materials to the Erickson Foundation by January 4, 1986. The theme for the meeting is “Ericksonian Therapy: State of the Art?” Proposals for presentations on any aspect of Ericksonian hypnotherapy will be reviewed. Papers will be considered for publication in the Congress proceedings to be edited by Jeffrey K. Zeig, Ph.D. and Stephen R. Lankton, M.S.W. (tentatively entitled “A Handbook of Ericksonian Therapy”).

The Milton H. Erickson Foundation does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, national or ethnic origin.

The Evolution of Psychotherapy Conference

“The First Hundred Years”

What is mental health? What is psychotherapy? How did it develop; and where is it evolving? These are some of the questions that will be addressed at The Evolution of Psychotherapy Conference to be held in Phoenix, Arizona, December 11-15, 1985. Some of the other topics to be covered include schizophrenia, dreams, anxiety, and social issues.

Psychotherapy is a relatively young science. It was only 100 years ago that Sigmund Freud first showed interest in the psychological aspect of medicine. Just after World War II schools of psychotherapy developed that radically departed from psychoanalytic theories that dominated clinical practice since Freud. The last 40 years have seen a proliferation of schools, each with its own exemplary practitioners and theorists. Oftentimes there has been divergence of opinion among experts, and the field of psychotherapy has been polarized.

The Evolution of Psychotherapy Conference marks the end of the initial century of modern psychotherapeutic practice. This is the first comprehensive meeting of outstanding experts from contemporary disciplines. One purpose of the Conference is to identify the commonalities that underlie successful clinical work. It features a faculty of 26 internationally renowned experts, each of whom is a leader or founder of a major psychotherapeutic approach. This is an opportunity to see some of the greatest names in contemporary psychology. The faculty include: Aaron Beck, Bruno Bettelheim, Murray Bowen, Albert Ellis, Mary Goulding, Robert Goulding, Jay Haley, Ronald Laing, Arnold Lazarus, Cloe Madanes, Judd Marmor, James Masterson, Rollo May, Salvador Minuchin, Zerka Moreno, Erving Polster, Miriam Polster, Carl Rogers, Ernest Rossi, Thomas Szasz, Virginia Satir, Paul Watzlawick, Carl Whitaker, Lewis Wolberg, Joseph Wolpe, and Jeffrey Zeig.

Interest in The Evolution of Psychotherapy Conference is extraordinary. The Conference is now sold out. Never before in history has a major psychology meeting been filled three months prior to the convocation. This convention has captured the attention of clinicians around the world and it will probably be the largest meeting ever to be held solely on the topic of psychotherapy. One of the Evolution faculty called the Conference “the biggest event in the annals of psychotherapy.”

During his first trip to the United States, Dirk Jan Swets, M.D., presented a one-day seminar entitled Psychosomatic Complaints: The Use and Limits of Hypnosis. Dr. Swets is head of the outpatient department of a large psychiatric hospital in Delft, Holland and is Director of Training for the Netherlands Society of Hypnotherapy. A professional quality five-hour audio recording of this lecture is available. The detailed, treatment-focused presentation reflects Dr. Swets’ 12 years of innovative work with hypnosis. He addresses the importance of assessing and neutralizing secondary gains and family issues, how to strengthen post-hypnotic suggestions, the use of metaphors, and directing the client’s own problem-solving skills through trance. The general treatment approach and specific hypnotic paradigms for migraines, hayfever symptoms, asthma and stuttering are outlined. Dr. Swets then discusses strategies for the use of hypnosis with children and difficult-to-treat cases. The session further explores the use of hypnotic techniques in the treatment of depression, anxiety, and chronic pain. The session will conclude with a presentation on the use of hypnosis in the treatment of the elderly. The seminar will conclude with a question and answer session, which will provide an opportunity for participants to ask questions and receive feedback on their own clinical experiences.

Richard Dimond, Ph.D., co-authored a paper entitled “Higher-order Brain Injured Patients and Cognitive Rehabilitation With The Context of Psychotherapy.” The paper, presented by co-author Jonathon L. Hess, Ph.D., at the Advanced Conference on Cognitive Rehabilitation in Princeton, NJ describes a collaborative program by the two in which Hess does neuro-psychological evaluations with individuals who have sustained closed-head injuries and Dimond conducts Ericksonian-based psychotherapy as part of the rehabilitation program.

Mel Bucholtz, M.A., offered a 5-day workshop on “Ericksonian Hypnosis: Stillness Becoming Alive” from June 24-28, 1985 at the Omega Institute for Holistic Studies in Rhineback, New York.

TRANCEWORK: An Introduction to Clinical Hypnosis
by Michael D. Yapko, Ph.D.
Published by Irvington Publishers, Inc.,
551 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10017

TRANCEWORK: An Introduction to Clinical Hypnosis is an extremly well-written, comprehensive introductory text on the subject of clinical hypnosis. Yapko takes hypnosis out of the realm of the mystical and ritualistic formal induction and defines it in the broader context of communication and interpersonal influence.

TRANCEWORK begins with a chapter explaining misconceptions about hypnosis, and ends with a discussion of ethical issues. In between are discussions and advice on subjects such as structuring suggestions, hypnotic communication patterns, formal inductions, and resisting resistance.

While Yapko presents the broad spectrum of hypnotic communication techniques, the influence of the Ericksonian strategic approach is very much evident. However, rather than limiting the book to one particular approach, the author presents both direct and indirect methods, complete with examples and advantages and disadvantages for each approach.

This is an excellent book for the clinician who is interested in expanding his range of communication skills, with or without the induction of formal trance. It is geared to the beginning hypnotherapist, but contains valuable information for the more advanced clinician. The author explores trance work theoretically, but also includes specific examples of how to translate theory into practice. Each chapter is followed by discussion questions, and a list of "things to do" which provides an important adjunct to the readings.

Perhaps the greatest strength of trancework is that it presents hypnotic communication as a useful tool for all psychotherapists, and explains this approach in clear, concise, and understandable language.

The Wisdom of Milton H. Erickson
by Ronald Havens

A book review usually comments on the author's novelty of ideas, clarity of expression, points of controversy, etc. To judge this work by the usual standards would be unfair both to Ron Havens and to future readers. He has edited a collection of ideas to which he imparted his own organization. The concept of the book is original to the author—for the most part the thoughts it contains are not.

This book is a compilation of some of the written ideas of Milton Erickson; these are Erickson's words in Havens' priorities. It may be too comprehensive for some and too scattered for others. However, for those who could use a guidepost for coalescing their own ideas on treatment, this book is a gem. Havens has imparted his understanding of Ericksonian thought in a well-organized manner.

The sections of quotes are sequenced logically. Havens' own comments are included as a prelude to each, and they are this book's greatest strength and weakness. His discussion of utilization, the uniqueness of the individual, and the creation of a climate for therapy should be read periodically by all of us. They are a good antidote for professional smugness. Havens clarifies the often muddled relationship between hypnotherapy and psychotherapy by emphasizing the common treatment principles involved. The section on hypnotherapy avoids bogging down in technique and I, for one, was glad.

One weakness was the discussion of "objective" reality which seems the antithesis of Erickson's idea of the unique experiential life of each patient. Also, comments about therapy as "pushing the perceptual, emotional... buttons" sounded too mechanistic and are potentially misleading.

Even with these weaknesses, Havens has produced an enlightening, practical, useful anthology of the thought of Erickson. This book is a welcome and unique addition to the library of "Erickson" books. Shelve it next to the Collected Papers and use it often.

HYPNOTIC TEACHING TALES
of Milton H. Erickson, M.D. as told by
LEN BERGANTINO, ED.D., PH.D.

The utilization of storytelling to gain access to the unconscious mind and restore sensory integration where developmental gaps exist in those whose focus is on external objects—concrete thinking. The stories often have the additional effect of a series of psychodynamic releases that result in existential life shifts and symptom resolution. There will be a focus on here and now nuances on sensory, conscious and unconscious levels from which to make the critical shifts in stories to meet the individual needs of the patient.

Trained by Milton H. Erickson, M.D., (clinical hypnosis); Jim Simkin, Ph.D., (gestalt therapy); and Carl Whitaker, M.D., (family therapy). Heavily influenced by Wilfred R. Bion, M.R.C.S., (psychoanalysis).

NEW PERSPECTIVES ON MILTON ERICKSON

EXPERIENCING ERICKSON
An Introduction to the Man and His Work

By Jeffrey K. Zeig, Ph.D.

Now a leading practitioner and teacher of Ericksonian psychotherapy, a former student of the late Milton Erickson and close associate until his death, has written a uniquely personal account of Erickson the psychotherapist, the hypnotist, the teacher, and the man.

In EXPERIENCING ERICKSON, Dr. Zeig provides new insight into Erickson's thinking and techniques, his contributions to psychotherapy, and unusual methods of teaching. The author explains how Erickson overcame tremendous physical handicaps, in fact made use of them to develop his own distinctive approach to psychotherapy. The book is colored with many details about Zeig's personal experiences with Erickson, and those reported by former patients.

The final section of EXPERIENCING ERICKSON is by Erickson himself. It presents the transcript of Zeig's first three full days learning from him, and includes discussion of numerous cases never before disclosed. By integrating the persona and the methods of the great innovator and therapist, Dr. Zeig casts new light on the basic principles of Ericksonian Psychotherapy.

"Zeig has done a masterful and sensitive job of painting a three dimensional portrait of Erickson not only as a unique pioneer, clinician and teacher, but as an understandable person. While written quite simply, it is a work of dignity revealing many human sides of Erickson not of a one-dimensional "guru". This book can only enhance the incorporation of his ideas by therapists interested in expanding their clinical prowess." — Richard Fisch, M.D.

"An important contribution toward understanding many of the attitudes and methods utilized by Erickson with his patients... This book constitutes a valuable addition to the growing literature about one of the most interesting personalities in our field." — Lewis R. Wolberg, M.D., Founder and Emeritus Dean, Postgraduate Center for Mental Health

Accreditation

The Milton H. Erickson Foundation is approved by the American Psychological Association to offer continuing education for psychologists. The approval is limited to organizations and does not necessarily imply endorsement of individual offerings. The Foundation has been granted three year full approval as a sponsor of continuing education programs for psychologists.

The Milton H. Erickson Foundation has recently been resurveyed by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) and awarded six year accreditation as an accredited sponsor of continuing medical education for physicians.

ACCME accreditation seeks to assure both physicians and the public that the continuing medical education activities sponsored by the Milton H. Erickson Foundation meets the high standards of the Essentials for Accreditation of Sponsors of Continuing Medical Education, as specified by the ACCME.

The ACCME rigorously evaluates the overall continuing medical education programs of organizations and institutions according to these standards, which have been approved by all seven of the sponsoring organizations of the ACCME. These are: the American Board of Medical Specialties, the American Hospital Association, the American Medical Association, the Association of American Medical Colleges, the Association for Hospital Education, the Council of Medical Specialty Societies and the Federation of State Medical Boards.
BOOK REVIEW
Modern Clinical Hypnosis for Habit Control
by Charles M. Citrenbaum, Mark E. King, and William I. Cohen
$18.50, 200 pp. WW Norton, 1985

It is possible for therapists who use hypnotherapy to build an entire practice treating habit disorders if they so desire, and I know a few who have. Much has been written about the use of hypnosis with the treatment of habit disorders and I can appreciate the authors' efforts to publish a volume devoted to this problem. The authors limit themselves to three major habit disorders—smoking, weight control, and alcohol abuse—although they state the approaches described in the book can be used with other habit problems as well.

Modern Clinical Hypnosis for habit control is targeted for health care professionals already experienced in the use of hypnosis. The authors state that “modern clinical hypnosis” refers to hypnosis as defined by Milton H. Erickson, M.D. They caution the reader not to imitate Erickson and that their book should not be read as an attempt to replicate or present his work.

To some extent, I think the authors have succeeded in doing that, not because they have not presented Erickson’s work (which they do) but because they present so much of the “NLP model.” The book is generously sprinkled with NLP-isms such as “keep sensory channels open,” “polarity response,” “future pace,” “ecological checking,” “primary representational system,” and “anchoring.” Moreover, the authors have apparently adopted an end-justifies-the-means philosophy by stating, “we even lie to patients, and we believe that is OK too as long as it is done for the purpose of helping…” (p. 14).

Much of the book is devoted to the NLP techniques of “pausing,” “anchoring,” and step six “reframing.” The authors state that the “reframing” technique is the “heart of the modern hypnotic approach to the treatment of habit disorders” (p. 111). They do not indicate any reference to support this view, and I could not find any reference to support this claim in Erickson’s work or in any other recent publication on hypnosis. A more accurate statement would be that the step six “reframing” technique is at the heart of their approach to the treatment of habit disorders. The authors’ credit, rather than making extravagant claims, they state that the treatment process may take several sessions over many months. Indeed some of these case studies suggest that the authors do some “blue-collar” work with their patients rather than some “asbracadabra presto chango” techniques.

Just as the authors did not reference their view on reframing, other key ideas (sometimes entire chapters) were also unacknowledged. They claim to have bad memories for their sources and that “specific ideas (of other authors and teachers) have not been identified as theirs because we have so completely internalized them ourselves” (p. xii). It is clear to me who the various sources were in their chapters on direct and indirect communication, reframing and metaphors. Surely one of the three authors of this book could also recognize, remember, and give proper credit to the sources of these ideas. On the other hand, the chapters on medical aspects of habit disorders and on variables for success were helpful in terms of emphasizing the need for proper screening and medical management of habit disorders, and in terms of using a variety of resources in treatment.

It would have been beneficial if the authors discussed a wider variety of habit disorders, including some of the more common childhood variety like enuresis and nailbiting. They also could have discussed a broader range of hypnotic treatment approaches instead of emphasizing NLP “reframing” so much. As I read the book at times I had the feeling the authors and I had attended the same workshops (perhaps even at the same time) since some of the authors’ anecdotes and illustrations were the same ones I heard at workshops held by Paul Carter and Steven Gilligan, and Richard Bandler and John Grinder. Overall, the book could be more useful to novice practitioners of hypnosis rather than to the experienced hypnotist who might regard it as a limited review of hypnotic approaches to the treatment of habit disorders.
